SCATHING REBUKE OF TRIBUNE PARTY

Congressman Howell Bares
Perfidy of Moral Outcasts
Who Are Leaders.

PLAY IN WITH DEMOCRATS

Mr. Howell Urges Republicans and All
Other Friends of Utah to Stand by Ticket.

Congressman Joseph Howell discussed the issues of the present campaign last night at an enthusiastic rally held at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Callister, 360 G street, and the questions to be decided at the polls November 8 were also outlined by John F. Bowman, Sheriff Joseph C. Sharp and W. H. Tobias, candidate for the legislature. The rally was well attended. Music was furnished by an orchestra led by Miss Romania Hyde, and Mrs. Callister served refreshments after the speaking.

Congressman Howell, who returned from Millard county yesterday afternoon, said that he came bearing good tidings for the Republicans on Millard, and after a week in that part of the state, he had no hesitancy in saying that larger Republican majorities than ever before would be shown in the returns from Millard county.

Mr. Howell said that although the liquor question in the state and the question of whether Utah should be represented in Congress by men who were willing and able to fight successfully for protection for the industries of the state, were regarded as the paramount issues of the campaign, the really important question in Salt Lake county was whether or not the American party should be allowed to take charge of the treasury of Salt Lake county and change the administration of the affairs of the county from a businesslike and progressive basis to one of loaf, graft and extravagance.

Whether Salt Lake county wanted to forge ahead with its program of improvements, or wanted to go into bankruptcy with only unsavory odors from its administration in place of good roads and bridges, was the real question in Salt Lake county. He said that the Democrats could not hope to win in Salt Lake county and, realizing this fact, the American party had been giving the aid it could to the Democratic cause.

To this end, Mr. Howell said, the Salt Lake Tribune and its unspeakable evening edition were having only kind words and encouragement for the Democrats.

Moral Outcasts Control.

The gang of plunderers and moral outcasts who controlled the Tribune, he said, were not entirely without political sense, and they had used this gift to the best of their ability by assuming the position that everything they could do to hold the regular Democrats in line and to influence unstable Republicans to vote the Democratic ticket meant just to many votes for the American party.

It was simply a case of "if the Democrats get enough votes in Salt Lake county the Americans stand a chance of electing their county ticket." He said the Americans were not afraid of the Democrats in Salt Lake county, for if they were the Tribune would be fighting the Democrats, instead of working for them and in perfect harmony with the Democratic county and state committees.

"If I lived in Salt Lake I would say, 'By all means beat the American party,'" said Mr. Howell. "It would be an extremely dangerous experiment to give that control of the treasury of Salt Lake county, for the record of that party's extravagance in Salt Lake is such that he who runs can read, and if he who runs doesn't read, the man who gets a tax notice will have to read it."

Approval of Taft.

"Two years ago the people of the state of Utah gave a magnificent vote of confidence to William H. Taft, that great jurist, statesman and leader of men, and in this election the voters of Utah will have another opportunity to express their approval of his administration. Aside from local and state issues, it is a question whether the people want to return an undivided Republican delegation to Congress—a delegation that will work with and for the President of the United States, and a delegation that will look after the interests of the state of Utah in a manner that will assure protection for the great industries of the state."

"Has not President Taft kept the faith with the people of Utah and with the nation? I say he has in every act. Shortly after his election a Republican County Ticket.

Port Wine on Port Bow--- and What's in a Name?

"WHAT'S in a name?" The question is an old one, and has precedence over the query: "How old is Ann?" It has been variously answered, and in a satisfactory manner, but not so in certain instances of the American party in recent years. To them the question was like unto the interrogation: "If sewer outlet costs $16,000, and repairs on said sewer, how much can be used, such $16,000, how much is a sewer?"

This bunch of hierarch-hunters met in solemn convocation a few days ago and decided to solve the question, and they almost succeeded; after much deliberation and recrimination, charges of double-cross, and threatened suits of injunction.

All this grief, waiting, threats and gnashing of teeth was caused by an effort to install upon a name for a dredge installed by the city on the surplus canal on Twelfth South, near Jordan river, and the selection of officials who would launch the craft with due dignity and decorum. A meeting was held to arrange a program, and all went as merry as a wedding bell until the problem of selecting a name for the $12,000 beauty and the man to christen the craft came before the patriots assembled.

Trouble started right off the reel. Numerous names were suggested, such as "Dolly Dollars," "Moran," "Grass-roots," etc. Some one proposed the name of "The Midnight Belle." Finally a compromise was effected, and it was agreed to name the vessel "The Midnight Belle," with City Attorney H. J. Dinwiddie as godfather.

When the dove of peace was about to hover over the meeting, trouble broke out afresh. The question of the brand of wine to be used in the ceremony was raised. Martin Mulvey of the dredge, a pint free of charge, but the kind could not be agreed upon, and was put to Dinwiddie. The latter, it is said, once testified that he bought a glass of port at Mulvey's after 12 o'clock at night, and he decided upon port to be furnished after the saloon closed.

But supposing something should happen to Dinwiddie before or during the important ceremony? asked one. What? Why not name assistants? Imagine Dinwiddie, as he stood on the deck of the noble vessel, his whiskers quivering from emotion, the wind and the vibrations of his intellect, about to break the bottle of port over the head of the noble vessel, the dredge, the "Midnight Belle," and that he should be overcome by the exigency of the occasion? Who would take his place? This difficulty was finally surmounted by the selection of Chief of Police S. M. Barlow and Captain of Detectives R. M. Beckstead.

But, alas and alack! Pearing additional trouble, City Engineer George McGonagle and Sam Sheriff of the board of public works quietly slipped down to the dredge one day recently and rolled the craft into the water without ceremony. This required considerable time, and the dredge, 55 tons, is fourteen feet wide and 65 feet in length. It draws about 30 inches of water, considerably more than the dredge which was drawn with Mulvey's port wine thrown in.

But, Dinwiddie is not to be denied. In about two weeks the dredge is to be in operation, and then the ceremonies will take place. Pat Moran has offered the use of his saloon, and the chief christener and his assistants to the scene, and Watermaster Thomas Hobday has generously offered to furnish orders of injunction; and the fact that the dredge was slipped into the water ahead of scheduled time, the christening is to take place in a few days, and be named "The Midnight Belle."

Politics Poured on People in Pallid Parlors of Death

TO MOURN their party's demise in advance, a score or so of Americans, mostly women, draped themselves about the walls of the Qualtrough-Alcott funeral parlors, 544 South Main street, last night and listened devotedly through two hours of somber oratory peculiarly fitting to the surroundings.

Possibly from political prospects or propinquity with the pallid parlors of death, the gathering partook of a sad and solemn spirit, which quelled and subdued to a hushed and awed silence even the usual outlandish voice of that eat-en-alive American, A. J. Weber. And even more fitting was his subject—the dead and buried past with its ghosts and goblin spooks.

Armed with an ancient manuscript dug from the cobwebbed attic of some veteran of the early days, Weber demonstrated Congress passed a tariff law which has afforded protection to the industries of the nation, thereby bringing about continued prosperity and confidence in the business world.

Record of Legislation.

"In addition to this tariff bill, the Republican Congress has passed other measures which have made a record for important legislation in the last two years. The postal savings bank bill, the court of commerce bill and others of vital importance to the citizens of Utah have been enacted into laws. Through the legislation of this Congress, the shippers of Utah have been relieved of the long-continued unjust discrimination against them on the part of the railroads, and the long and short haul clause means dollars and cents in the pockets of the citizens of the whole mountain country, through the preventing of a continuance of discrimination against the shippers and consumers."

"On the other hand, the Democratic party in 1892 passed a tariff act that brought about immediately one of the most disastrous panics in the history of the country. The Democratic party has taken up a new cry every four years, and it has as often thrown them in the scrap heap. In reality the only persistent effort of the Democratic party has been in favor of wiping out the protective tariff measures which are the very life of the important industries of the state of Utah. I warn you that if the Democrats are elected in controlling of the next Congress we will have an assault on the Payne-Aldrich tariff bill that will bring about a repetition of the Cleveland hard times in 1912."

Kill Protective Tariff.

"Champlin, who would be speaker of the House in the event of Democratic victory, is an avowed free trader, and he has said repeatedly that if it was in his power he would wipe out every custom house and every protective tariff in existence. Here in Utah, between elections, we all agree on the principle of protection. John Dern, Uncle Jesse Knight and William Knight are for protection, and I remember when the House committee was considering the tariff on lead and sugar, some of these Utah free trade Democrats got down on their knees to Congress and begged that the duty remain on the products of Utah. Any reduction, they said, meant sure ruin for the industries of the state. Now, these men are asking the people of Utah to vote against the very things they have been begging for at Washington."

Uncle Jesse's Paradox.

"My friend, Uncle Jesse Knight, has the marvelous power of transmitting the influence of his fame and money deal into gold and silver to line Uncle Jesse's coffers, but, I understand, he has within the last day or two agreed to donate a fact that a few months ago he begged the Utah congressional delegation to keep the tariff on lead. Now, Uncle Jesse says he was misled on the proposition by some one who told him that the leading industry of the state would suffer if the tariff were reduced."

Speaking of the Republican insurgency in the middle west, Mr. Howell said that this movement was brought about by the residents of the Mississippi states, who, in the early days of the western and Pacific coast states so well in framing the new tariff bill.

Utah Allowed Rights.

"Eight years ago, when Reed Smoot went to Washington as senator from the state of Utah, he was stopped at the door of the capitol and his right to a seat was questioned. The Republican party, in the face of listening to the hysterical protest of the protectionists, surveyed the situation calmly and without passion, and after a thorough and careful investigation, Utah, the 'unloved child of the Union,' was allowed her just rights and recognition. Now, we find that the Utah senators are looked upon as big, courageous, intelligent and efficient men at Washington. They have the ear of the President and access to the heads of the great departments at Washington. Their judgment is valued and their wishes respected in Washington, and they are able to render service for the state and nation, which has before been rendered by senators from a western state."

Shatter Traditions.

Mr. Howell asked his hearers if they thought it wise to abandon such men because of vote-seeking clap-trap raised by the Democratic party of Utah. He said that in placing the Democratic party in the Democratic platform, the leaders of that party had no thought of carrying it out, and furthermore, the prohibition plank of the Democrats was contrary to the traditions and principles of the Democratic party, in that it directly opposed to personal and individual liberty. It was summary legislation and was farthest from the doctrine of local self-government, which had been advocated since the time of Jefferson.

In Salt Lake?

"How would state-wide prohibition work in Salt Lake with the American party in control, and with the sentiment of the people against the enforcement of such a law? Here in Utah we have the most stringent statutes against houses of ill fame and against women of the underworld, and yet these places flaunt their shame to the world, protected and fostered by the city administration. This, I believe, is proof enough that prohibition, in Salt Lake would not prohibit, and on the other hand, state-wide prohibition would simply take away every opportunity for controlling and regulating the saloons of Salt Lake. The saloonkeeper and lawbreaker does not care to whom he sells or when he sells or how he sells. Take away the last vestige of wholesome regulation and men, women and children would be at the mercy of the divekeeper."

Republicans Use Buttons.

John F. Bowman took for his subject the button which is being distributed by the Democrats in Salt Lake county bearing the words "Saloons cannot live without boys. Have you a boy to spare?" This, he said, was supposed to be a Democratic slogan this year, but, in reality, it was just as much a Republican slogan for the Republicans in this campaign were just as much in earnest in their purpose to do away with the evils of the liquor traffic as any of the Democrats. The chief difference was that the Republicans proposed a method that would prove effective, while the Democrats, for vote-getting purposes, presented a plan that would make conditions worse from every point of view.

Deal With Democrats.

Sheriff Joseph C. Sharp presented direct evidence that the American party had made a deal with the Democratic organization, whereby the Americans were to give support to the Democratic state ticket in return for Democratic support for the American county ticket in Salt Lake county. He said that if William H. King, Samuel A. King and a few other Democrats leaders really thought that a state-wide prohibition law would be enacted in Utah, they would have a panic from which they might never recover.

W. H. Tobias, candidate for the legislature on the Republican ticket, spoke briefly, asserting that the Republican platform stood for the most effective solution of the liquor question in Utah, and that if elected he would not only keep the saloons, but would care to whom he sells or when he sells or how he sells. Take away the last vestige of wholesome regulation

MILLARD COUNTY RESENTS ATTACKS

Voters Are Displeased With
Manner in Which Democrats Conduct Campaign.

Congressman Joseph Howell and Charles M. Morris arrived yesterday morning from a speaking tour in Millard county. Mr. Howell reports that the Republicans of Millard are energetic and aggressive for the triumph of Republican principles. The present generation have not forgotten the ruinous results of the last Democratic administration and its tree trade proclivities, and shudder at the mere shadow of a resurgence of Democratic supremacy.

The inglorious record of the state Democracy and its shift and insincere course, when in power, is still fresh in the public mind. The malvolent and scandalous nature of the campaign the Democrats are making, has aroused the intense indignation of all honorable people.

B. H. Roberts' unfounded and unsupported allegations of the corruption of Governor Sny, Senator Sny and the other members of Utah's delegation in Congress has disclosed to the public the true nature of the Democratic nature of the Democratic campaign.

The people are thoroughly disgusted with these disgraceful methods, and will administer stern and richly merited rebuke to the Democratic leaders on November 8.

GIBBS COMPLAINS AGAINST UNKNOWN

Sues Republican City Committee, but Fails to Name the Members.

Naming a long list of defendants, the greater part belonging to the court families of "Doe and Roe," the John J. Wallace collection agency yesterday filed a suit in the civil division of the city court to recover an assigned claim of G. A. Gibbs. The claim is for $142.50, alleged to be due Gibbs for clerical services rendered the Republican party city committee from October 15, 1907, until November 6, 1907.

The complaint, reciting the assignment of the claim by Gibbs to the plaintiff, says that Gibbs was employed as a clerk at $5 per day; that out of $192.50 due him for such work, he received but $50. The defendants to the suit are the Republican city committee: James Devine, chairman; Harry Joseph, J. U. Eldredge, Jr., John James, Joseph P. James and Joseph F. Doe; Richard, John, James, Joseph, Richard F., John F., James F., and Joseph F. Roe, "whose true names will be inserted as soon as they are learned."

Idaho democracy has shunned Dubois of late years, and who he generally, are about as tickled to see him as if they ran nails in their feet. Practically barred from Idaho politics, Mr. Dubois came to Utah with the expectation of exercising his voice, but as the Tribune party and the Democrats made a deal with the Republicans, it was feared by leaders of both parties that Dubois would scare away too many Democrats, and he was given no assignment.

The American party will turn A. J. Weber loose tonight at Labor hall and tell him he may talk himself hoarse the night of November 4. Have Met. Another American rally will be held at Labor hall on the evening of November 4, which only colored voters are invited.
